Headteacher's daily blog

Date: Wednesday 13th May 2020

Dear all,

I know many of you will be wondering about details about the proposed re-opening of schools for certain year groups. You may or not be aware that the government's announcement on Sunday evening was followed by some details the following day, but the main documents for schools were only sent through yesterday morning. At the moment unions and parents are understandably perplexed by how the proposals are expected to work in practice and I think further information will have to be released over the next few days following discussions between the government and teaching bodies. I will try to give you a much fuller description of the government's plans on Thursday as Norfolk schools are still also awaiting Local Authority guidance.

Many of the year group plans have been including links to the White Rose maths resources. Up to now, access to all the worksheets have been free to schools, but this changed from the beginning of the week. The school has now purchased a number of licences so that access to all the worksheets should continue to be freely available to work from. The delay between paying the subscription has meant that some of the teachers' plans had to be modified on Monday and Tuesday. Hopefully, all the links to worksheets and resources should now be freely downloadable as before.

Tim Yau has sent on the following information about a Cringleford Assembly gathering:

You are invited to help shape and be a part of the new community gathering called Cringleford Assembly.

There'll be fun and games, music, singing, activities and a thought for the day. Sadly you'll have to provide your own pastries and coffee as we're on-line only due to the lockdown.

Timothy Yau is inviting you to a scheduled Zoom meeting.
